

People Transient Neurological Attacks Have A Higher Risk For Stroke

If you suffer from temporary amnesia or confusion - transient neurological attacks (TNAs) - you may have a higher risk of developing a stroke, according to an article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), December 12 issue. TNAs are less than 24 hours long; they are episodes of temporary neurological symptoms. [click link for full article]

If you suffer from temporary amnesia or confusion - transient neurological attacks (TNAs) - you may have a higher risk of developing a stroke, according to an article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), December 12 issue. TNAs are less than 24 hours long; they are episodes of temporary neurological symptoms. [click link for full article]

Read more at: <http://www.medicalnewstoday.com/articles/92694.php>.