

Implant Brands

Last Updated Friday, 19 September 2008

Please note before you read any of this material about various dental implants that it may not be accurate or up to date at the time you are reading it. If you have any updated information, I would appreciate receiving it so that I may make the necessary corrections. SRD

When we come right down to it, this industry is driven on a brand by brand basis. Manufacturers tout their product and individual dentists have their own favorites. Someone who is successful with a given brand is not likely to try anything else while someone who is having problems with one brand may find something else that does work better in his or her hands... and then again, he or she might have trouble with them all.

The purpose of this section is to look at the major implant brands out there and see if we can find some perceived advantages or disadvantages for each brand. We will also give you contact information for each company and I will give you my humble opinion as to the overall worthiness of the product.

If you disagree with my assessment, please let me know. If I have missed something or spoken unfairly about a particular product, I am more than willing to hear what you have to say and to rethink my position. Just remember that although I am familiar with all of these products and have used many of them, I have not used them all and sometimes there might be something that I am not aware of with a particular product that I have not actually used...

S.
Robert Davidoff, DMD, FACP

Attention Implant manufacturers....

I invite all of you to please advise me of updates on the information here. I will do everything possible to provide the latest, most accurate information. SRD